Fifty Years of Soil Research

F.A. Wyatt showing some striking differences in legume growth.

Last Friday afternoon, as campus activity was tapering off for the weekend, a significant event was taking place some 110 km to the southwest at the Breton Plots. Fifty years of research work at the plots was commemorated by the University's Department of Soil Science, the Alberta Department of Agriculture, students enrolled in the Faculty of Agriculture and Forestry and many of the farm folk who live in the Breton area. The latter group included Mrs. Elsie Flesher, widow of Ben Flesher, the man on whose land the plots were established.

The anniversary field day began with brief remarks and greetings from the Honourable Dallas Schmidt, Minister of Agriculture; W.F. Allen, Associate Vice-President (Academic) of the University; and J.P. Bowland, Gordon Wyatt, F.A. Wyatt, and Eric Kneen line up in proportion to yield.

Dean of the Faculty of Agriculture and Forestry.

J.D. Newton, Professor Emeritus of Soil Science who, along with the late F.A. Wyatt, initiated the experimentation at the plots, spoke on that work, noting that it involved the placement of strips of phosphate and nitrogen fertilizers across a portion of Mr. Flesher's land. Over the years a number of fertilizer treatments have been applied with a view to increasing both the quality and quantity of the yield. The results of the experiments have contributed to successful farming practices on Alberta's gray wooded soils.

Following Dr. Newton's remarks, a group of speakers from the Department of Soil Science outlined the lessons which have been drawn from the various experiments. The speakers and their topics were as follows: J.A. Robertson, nutrient status; G.R. Webster, acidity and liming; S. Pawluk, tilth; C.F. Bentley, crop quality; W.B. McGill, the future of the Plots.

Dr. McGill, Chairman of the Department, said it had been suggested in some quarters that, because of financial constraints, the University discontinue the research at the plots. Such action would, he said, be analogous to the University burning all its rare books. The books still have much to offer and so do the Breton Plots, the longest continuing research plots in Canada. □

Klondike Parade Marshall Celebrates 25 Years

The fever is mounting as the city is geared up for its annual extravaganza commemorating the opening up of the Klondike. The Klondike, where gold was plentiful, some dreams realized, and others squashed.

Although the rush is long over the excitement and fanfare remains in the form of Klondike Days. Certainly one of the major attractions is the spectacular kick-off parade. It lasts only several hours, but what the spectators do not see is the year-round planning which takes place prior to the parade of floats and crazy clowns.

However, Doug Burns, of the University's Registrar's office, knows and all too well. As a matter of fact, after twenty-five years as an instrumental force in the organizing of the K-Days parade, Mr. Burns has decided to hang up his hat, his parade marshal hat, that is.

For the past fifteen years, Doug Burns has been the man leading the parade through city streets, not only in the literal sense but behind the scenes as well. As parade marshal, his job, along with the parade committee, is to organize all floats and participants and to set the pace by riding in the lead car.

It is no easy job. "We begin working on the next year's parade immediately after one is finished," he said, "while everything is still fresh in our minds."

He got caught in the whirlwind of K-Days excitement while working with the military. In 1954, the Klondike Days Association approached the military asking that it lend them an "Edmonton product", whose knowledge of protocol and organizational talent could be used in parade preparations.

Immediately the commanding officer thought of Doug Burns. After all, who else could fit the bill better than a native Edmon-tonian, a five generation one at that, and a man whose organizational experience extended back to his university days.

As a graduate of The University of Alberta, Mr. Burns served as the public relations officer for the Students' Union where it was his responsibility to organize all public events on campus.

The chance to direct this knowledge and expertise was welcomed and he began his long association with the K-Days exhibition and parade.

Initially he was the "working parade marshal," the man behind the scenes ensuring that all went according to Hoyle. Ten years later he was asked to move to the head of the parade and he hasn't looked back since.

His love for pomp and ceremony has kept him busy over the years but it has also had its rewards. In order to keep abreast of new ideas and innovations, he has travelled extensively throughout North America to view other similar extravaganzas, such as the Rose Bowl Parade, New Orleans's Mardi Gras and the

Included in his duties as parade marshal, Doug Burns, far right, is responsible for judging floats.

Quebec Winter Carnival parade.

Mr. Burns cannot cite one particular incident as his most memorable. He feels there have been many, ranging from meeting numerous dignitaries and celebrities to the feeling of satisfaction when another parade has finished. However, he feels the most pleasure comes from "watching children's eyes light up when a clown says hello or seeing people lined up three or four deep just to catch a glimpse of the parade." This is his reward for another year's work.

Mr. Burns has witnessed many changes in the parade and perhaps the most significant has been the shift from a predominantly military-type affair to an entertainment package which it is now.

"In the early days we weren't concerned with telling a story," he points out, "Representatives of community groups joined with the military and it was a hodge-podge of everything. Now we try to tie everything together in a story-like fashion."

His association with the Klondike Days parade has dominated his summer months for many years and now he says it is time to do something else.

What you ask? Perhaps take his first summer holiday in twenty-five years! □

Annual NASA K-Days Breakfast

To get on-campus personnel in the K-Days spirit the Non-Academic Staff Association is again hosting its annual Klondike Days breakfast, tomorrow, 20 June.

Now in its fourth consecutive year, the breakfast will serve up hot-off-the-griddle pancakes and sausages, along with juice and coffee. To keep people entertained while sipping their early morning coffee a honky-tonk piano player will bang on the ol' eighty-eights while a dance group will provide their own interpretation of Klondike craziness. To add to the mood, Klondike Kate and the Klondike Dollar girl will join the party as will Klondike Mike.

Everyone is encouraged to dress in Klondike attire, but don't worry you won't be turned away if you're not. Breakfast will be served from 7 to 10 a.m. in CAB, with entertainment scheduled to begin at 7:30. If past breakfasts are any indication this is bound to be another smashing success. And imagine, all this for only $1.75. □

HUB Renovations

Construction of the new entrance and pedway from HUB to the Fine Arts building should begin 21 July. The new entrance will provide main ground level pedestrian access to the Mall as well as a connection to Fine Arts. The structure will be made mostly of precast concrete combined with black aluminium panels and frames and tinted glass. The dark feature of the construction will provide a contrast to the HUB and will accentuate the HUB entrance itself. Landscaping, in conjunction with a simple thirty foot pylon sign, will contribute to the overall entrance accentuation. The pylon sign is in keeping with the university building name sign policy as it will be an enlarged version of the university building name signs now in use on campus. Work is expected to be completed by early in the new year. During this construction, the vehicle entrance to the south end of HUB will be closed off and an alternative route provided at the north end. Route maps may be obtained at the HUB office and all retail outlets. □

The architectural drawings shown above indicate the proposed revisions for the HUB Mall. Also illustrated, the new logo for internal signage. Below, the view from HUB of the projected overpass to the Fine Arts Building.

Professor M.V. Dimic of the Department of Comparative Literature, presented a paper entitled, "Romantic Irony in South Slavic Nineteenth Century Literature and in Pushkin's Evgenij Onegin" at the Canadian Association of Slavists at the University of Saskatoon, 24 May.

The University of Alberta was very well represented at the twenty-second Annual Meeting of the Canadian Federation of Biological Sciences held in Vancouver from 17 to 22 June 1979. Of the five hundred and seven papers presented at this meeting, fifty-four were contributed by scientists from the University of Alberta. Due to space limitations, Folio, is unable to list all of the contributors.

At the 42nd annual meeting of the Canadian Association of Radiologists held in Vancouver, B.C. from 23rd to 28th June, the Department of Radiology of the University of Alberta was well represented. Nine papers were presented by Departmental members both in Diagnostic Radiation and Radiation Oncology, as well as one invited refresher course. Dr. W.L. Ritchie won the Congress Award Session for the best research paper submitted by a Resident. His presentation was entitled "Experimental Subarachnoid Hemorrhage in the Cynomolgus Monkey: Assessment, Treatment and Evaluation."
